FOREWORD

On September 27, 1991 the J. Reuben Clark Law Society, in conjunction with the B.Y.U. Law School Alumni Association, sponsored a symposium on the Bill of Rights. Numerous scholars and special guests discussed the history, current impact and import of the Bill of Rights, as well as what the future portends as the Supreme Court and Congress struggle with the various meanings, interpretations and subtleties perceived to be inherent in the Bill of Rights.

The articles in this issue of the B.Y.U. Journal of Public Law by Frederick M. Gedicks, Tim Slover and Richard G. Wilkins are transcripts of speeches presented at the Bill of Rights Symposium. They appear substantially as they were given.
